

Bo Rice manages CCS' Mid-Atlantic and Southeast operations. Throughout his 33 years with CCS, Bo has guided organizations in the U.S., Europe, and Middle East and across all non-profit sectors to secure billions of dollars in philanthropic support.

Bo has worked with the most devoted individuals who give their energy to non-profit organizations. His passion is helping them fulfill their missions and secure the required philanthropic support to impact society.

“Our work is meaningful because there are urgent priorities in our regions, country, and world. Every day our responsibility grows with the elevated awareness of how people are impacted by philanthropy. It is especially gratifying to see sustained accomplishments long after the campaigns are completed - engaging new volunteers, expanding awareness, and the accompanying robust return on philanthropic investment.”

Bo co-chairs the Boys' Latin School of Maryland Board's development committee. He is past chair of the Peace Players International Board's development committee and has also served on the volunteer boards of Habitat for Humanity of New Castle County, the Association of Fundraising Professionals (AFP) Maryland Chapter, Sandtown Habitat for Humanity, and ePhilanthropy Foundation. Bo is a frequent lecturer at international, national, and regional conferences including AFP, AHP, Blackbaud, APRA, CASE, NAIS, and Volunteers of America.

Bo graduated from Denison University. He resides in Lutherville, Maryland with his wife, Maryann and are proud parents of their three sons, Nelson, Charles, and Robert.
